The whole session as the recording and the Foundry chat log have it: every speaker's track transcribed by machine and merged on the clock, with the table's rolls and chat cards in between. Verbatim and unedited — the stumbles, the cross-talk and the mis-hearings are the real thing.

 a roll     a chat card (an item, a feature, the party stash)     a whisper or a blind roll the players did not see

After the rest, he took a second level of exhaustion, further limiting his ability. The party headed out in the morning, and who searched for a stick to help Thomas walk? Morgash. What did you roll, Morgash? |

Well, between the natural 20 on Jettin's cartography skill, which crafts an excellent map, and it actually helps your way back home, too. You make good time. You don't see any dead fields or anything like that. But so far, your experience in the Misty Forest has been, it's a deep woods. It has a very sort of fae theme to it, as you've kind of encountered already. Most things are teeming with life, actually. And generally speaking, you're always walking your way through a woodland. And so no dead firearms or anything like that. As far as you know, Green Rest is the only place of civilization that's nearby. Anyway, so yeah, you march quite accurately, so you don't have to roll an encounter, wandering encounter check. And it's about maybe a half hour before sunset, and you arrive at the periphery of Green Rest. Anything you would like to do before you approach? |

| 00:07:13 | DM                     | Well, I put you on the screen. Yeah. Okay. So yeah, as you walk into town, you see one of Warren's scouts wave you, and he invites you in, and he's very excited, actually. And he says, can't believe it. You're back. I heard from the other scouts that you killed some of the displacer beasts. You're a hero. No, one of the guards who's greeting you at the town line.                             |

| 00:10:54 | Thomas A. Invictus     | Yes. And there was some. Yeah, it was quite a fight. Quite a fight. But then we ended up in a cave full of undead monsters. And some of the members of the previous party turned into a race. Because I don't know, whites. I think they were hit. They were hit. They were hit with some kind of a. Bell attached to their weapon. Turn them in.                                                      |

| 00:11:38 | Thomas A. Invictus     | That's what I think. I'm pretty. I'm pretty tired, but it's pretty scary. Listen, Ambrose, I'm going to head up to my room right now because I can barely walk with that meal really hit the spot. I'm just going to go rest and I'll wait for the priestess. So I'm going to go upstairs and into the room and I'm just going to kind of sit there and rest and take out my psalter and start praying |
| 00:11:43 | Jetten Elisedil        | still exhausted i'm gonna go rest as well yes absolutely right then that this has happened                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |

Morgash, as you're wrapping up your meal, you see a female dressed in brown sort of farmer's robes, and she's got like a little bag filled with herbs, and she says, where's the patient? Where's the patient?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| 00:13:33 | DM                     | Okay. So, she... Okay. She follows you to the room. Thomas is asleep, and she starts to look him over, and he says, and she just kind of looks bewildered, actually. And says, I don't see anything wrong, but he looks so sick. Let me try some of these herbs. And she grabs some holly from her bag and waves it over Thomas's head. And she just kind of just says, oh, great Shanti, please help this man. He needs your help. And nothing happens. And she goes into her bag, and she pulls out some herbs, and she says, these are healing herbs. Let me try. And she rubs them on Thomas's face. Nothing happens. She just sort of looks bewildered and says, I don't know. He seems to be resting now. Maybe if he came to the infirmary of the church. And she says, if that's all, I should be going. |

| 00:15:38 | DM                     | At some point, you all find yourself woken, dressed, standing on a hillside. And it seems to be a hill that you recognize from the edge of Greenrest's little valley. As you look around, there's a mist, but everything is beautiful and full. It looks like it's high summer, late on thick. In this image, though, there's no wheat fields. There are no orchards, nothing like that. Just pure field and forest. As you stand there, you look at each other.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| 00:16:31 | DM                     | Thomas, I'm sorry, Jeton, your necklace is growing bright green. Actually, now that you ask the question, it seems like it. But unlike before, you're all in the same dream. And as you suddenly realize that, you suddenly see that same beautiful woman that you saw in the previous stream. She looks young, blonde, she's barefoot. But this time, she looks straight at you, almost through you. And you hear her say, Corin, is that you? There you are. I knew you'd come back. Everything comes back to me. The green comes back. The swallows come back. Oh, my love, you took so long. Stay this time, please, stay. And I'll make it summer for you forever. She holds out her hands and starts to walk out towards you.                                                                              |

And I have some, yeah, I have some things to talk to Grant about too. I totally agree. Well, for example, I happen to know from my studies as a scribe that, uh, is the goddess of forgetfulness. And is there a connection there with this potion that they're giving everybody? First of all, and then I'm wondering if we have any spells like detect magic, detect poison, anything like that, that we could use on the potion and or the tree. And it might be, |

Well, yeah, Selma, she's the apothecary and she brews all of the potions in town. I mean, honestly, if we don't drink it, these weird dreams happen.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |

Maybe another day, everything will be better. You speculate. But in the meantime, you trudge your way to the apothecary, which is sort of on the outskirts of town. You take a well-trodden path. And let me put you on the map.                                                                                                                                                                                                       |

So I got hit by, we had a fight against some undead and I've just been so tired since then, uh, fights and a zombie. Was there a zombie? Well, we found from the previous party, we found some evidence that they had gone, you know, they had lost some, left some members behind. So we went to check on them and that's when we got into a fight with these undead creatures. |

There's a little note in here. Didn't you see this?                                                                                                                                                                             |

And the prize lies in exactly one of them. That's right. They were looking. There is treasure in one of the four ruins. It says... The other three are cold stone and whatever has crawled into it. We have Sarah's map. And Sarah has never been wrong twice, it says. The shrine wasn't a shrine. A graveyard. It goes on to say... So I guess... One at a time? And they already spent one. He says... One more ruin and two at worst. I'm done with this work and I'll buy a house by the tannery. The one you liked. Keep well. Do not worry. Um. Oh no. I don't think Tara is ever going to get this letter. Um. Here. Take it back. |

But the stories go that the founders of Green Rest were wandering the misty forest. And, you know, it's not exactly a friendly place, but they found this little valley with no fog. And basically, it's eternally summer here. How is crops? How can you not settle here? But for some reason, the tree keeps the fog away and blesses this land with eternal summer, basically. We're afraid that if the tree goes, maybe so too does our prosperity. |

And the reality is, as soon as you walk several hundred yards from the tree in any direction, the fog starts. It's sort of the center of the town. I can't help but think the two are connected, but I don't know how.                                                                                                                                                                                                     |

| 01:04:25 | DM                     | No, there was a dwarf, but he left. Honestly, it's not really a dwarf place, the misty forest. They like their trees or their mountains. And elves, they never really want to stay here. They don't feel comfortable, probably because of the tree, probably because they're bay-born and we're living in their lands. I'm not sure, but it's mostly humans and halflings. And we had a little family of half orcs, too, for a while. But they moved for other reasons. One of them got a job in Waterdeep. Don't get me wrong, good sir. I have nothing against half orcs or orcs. You're an orc. That's right. Great people. Just look different. I don't mean that in a bad way. |
| 01:05:31 | Gren Greenmantle       | do you know what do you know of anybody who lived here and then left gnomes or elves or where did the dwarf live                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |

It's probably their fey-born nature.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |

| 01:08:06 | DM                     | Yes, the church is crossed from the square. It's interesting. It's built in a grand style. It's dressed in gray stone, which honestly, to you, Amas, seems sort of odd. Oh, you're well learned. You know that the Earth Mother is a humble goddess of the field and farming. Why would she have a small jilted spire in this church? It's just the wrong scale. A farming god wouldn't have something like this. |

And you look and there's an entrance to the temple where the ping is.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| 01:09:06 | DM                     | Yep. And, oh, you're actually walking through someone's quarters. But it looks like it leads into the main temple regardless.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |

This is sort of like a bastion of safety in a dangerous place.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |

| 01:16:36 | DM                     | There's always some kind of creature that's spilling over from the forest. The displacer beasts were the worst, but we've had, we've had flying birds attack us on the roads. We've had, um, will-o'-wisps try and lure us into the woods to eat us and all kinds of other creatures that, from my research, uh, are typical of this area. And, Grant, you would know this because you're from the misty forest. That's absolutely right. It's not a safe place to be wandering around.                                |
| 01:17:11 | Gren Greenmantle       | is there anybody who's unhappy                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| 01:17:13 | DM                     | Why would there be? There's, there's no need for wanting anything. Oh, well, yeah, um, every, every, every two months or three months, we have a summer picnic that the church sponsors. Um, every year at the beginning of the year, we mark, we mark another year of bounty. And that's where we pull out the gilded, um, farm utensils. And we have, like, a ceremony, and we sort of thank the Earth Mother, things like that. I pray to her all the time. We have ceremonies and festivals, just like I told you. |

You actually had a brief conversation with him.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| 01:20:39 | Thomas A. Invictus     | we could ask maybe a random person. Yeah, I just wonder if there's anybody who's going to say, hey, you know, I can tell you something about this town, like some random person nervous. And he's in the tower, right? He lives up there. Oh, look, I'm just going to, I'm going to just before we go real quick, I'm just going to go to the graveyard over here and just talk to one of these random folks and see. Let's just see what they just a random guy. Hello, sir. My name is Thomas |
| 01:20:50 | Jetten Elisedil        | everyone seems to have the same story here wait did this guy did this guy say that there's fruit                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |

| 01:21:53 | Thomas A. Invictus     | Invictus. Yes, we are. Just wondering if you think that you have anything, can you think of anything strange going on in this town? Anything that you find odd about this town? Or do you, are you like everyone else when you say everything's just fine and haki-dory? Have you ever had the dream or did you start taking the tonic before the dream started? What are you doing hanging out in the graveyard?                                                                                                                                               |
| 01:21:54 | DM                     | I've heard of you. You're the heroes. What can I do for you? | 01:22:20 | DM                     | That's a strange question, but adventurers ask strange questions, I guess. I'm pretty happy. This is a good town to be in. You know, there's, there's the tonic that we take every week, but I've been doing that since I was a kid. It's not a problem.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| 01:22:40 | DM                     | Oh. Yeah. We usually take it when we're children. We all do. So it just, it, it shields us from the dream. And honestly, we get to live a better life. | 01:23:15 | DM                     | Honestly, it is kind of weird. Yeah. It is kind of weird, but, um, that's the way it was when I grew up. Um, and, uh, I, I heard that you were wounded. I can see you're still tired. They can't, they can't cast healing spells here for whatever reason. You know, I, I, I can't help but think that, you know, Shanti is not happy with what, with what they built here. I can't blame her. I think she would be happier with like a bubble for out or something, but it is what it is. And I don't want to cross the path of an angry God. So I do my best. |
| 01:24:00 | Morgash the Gravemaker | I hear you saying that your mother passed away two summers ago. That your mother passed away. Sorry. How do you know that your mother passed away two summers ago if it's summer? All the time.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| 01:24:06 | DM                     | Yeah. I mean, we bark the time of summer, um, but everything is always in bloom here. Uh, nothing ever really, you know, dies for plants or anything like that. The trees just grow and every summer they bear new fruit and spring and winter and fall. Okay.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |

You check your way up. Thomas, you stumble a little bit with your cane, but you eventually make it and you enter into the tower. Um. A man comes up. He's like, yes. May I help you?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |

Oh, well, you know, I, I am grateful for what you've done with the displacer beasts. And, um, uh, let me tell you the story that I know first. And I, I have good news for you. You're, you're heroes twice over as far as I can tell. Um, so yeah, the, the town was settled hundreds of years ago, generations. Um, we settled around that tree. Uh, as far as I know from my elders, you know, we came in as wanderers in the misty forest. And we finally found this place to settle. It was perfect. Everything was green. The trees always blossomed. What a place to be.                                                    |

And, um, so we settled here and, you know, I, I will admit there's the dreams. I personally believe they're connected to the tree. It's like a, a dryad of some sort that's perhaps dead. And, um, yeah, that's why we take the potions. It's like, now, from what I understand from the mayors before me, uh, there were some people that thought that this was all the benefit of Shantia and they built a church all wrong and, and she doesn't answer our prayers. The accolites swear that the, the, the bounty of this town is from the grace of Shantia. But I can tell you, I'm pretty sure Selma and I agree. It's, it's from that dryad. |

Oh, there he is, main cast. There, he joins you. And, um, yeah, the tree looks just as you saw it before. It's sort of unnerving now that you put it together. This is the tree in your visions and dreams, um, clearly in a decayed tree form. But, on the tips, you do see, um, little green buds that seem to be growing back. Oswin sort of looks at it and just marvels. And, he's like, never in the generations of this town has that tree ever grown a thing. This is amazing. Double heroes. Thank you, people. |

But I heard you guys killed undead and displacer beasts, and, and, oh my god, news is spreading that the tree is growing again. Can you believe it? I think so. I mean, they've, they've never seen it grow before. Um, you know, Selma's a little nervous. She doesn't know. I was talking to her earlier today. Why it would do that? Um... And she was kind of, like, not really happy that things are changing, but pretty much everybody thinks that, what could be bad? Everything in green rust is growing. Why shouldn't the tree? Finally! |

| 01:46:45 | DM               | Oh, yeah. I mean, of course. Like, people die? Uh, weird question. But now that you think about it?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| 01:46:58 | DM               | Well, I mean, you know, we're not a big town. It's not like people are dying every day, right?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| 01:47:12 | DM               | Possibly. But I don't think he'd like it that way either. But he's inside if you want to talk to him.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| 01:47:22 | DM               | I wish I could help more. But I'm looking forward to seeing you again. Because, you know, I just want to, like, have some friends to play with. So, okay, bye. Oh, yeah? I love games. What do you got?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| 01:47:30 | Gren Greenmantle | nice to see you i found this great game yeah it's called uh three card money well that's what they call it my um yep yeah i will bye a three dragon nanny i just bought it um pretty good how you doing oh good oh oh we did but there were two corpses left over in the in because they were so stinky and we realized they had these silver lockets that actually turned out to be quite valuable if you want to go get them you'll have somebody |
| 01:47:41 | DM               | Oh, is that one of them games where you get to play for apples?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| 01:47:48 | DM               | Sweet. Maybe you can show me later. It's getting late, and my mom's getting upset. It's bedtime. Or, I mean, it's dinner time. Well, yeah. | 01:50:07 | Jetten Elisedil  | want to head next after um oh i want to tell you before pip interrupted us as i got close to the tree uh the grave heart responded and seemed to pulse inside of my um inside of my pouch and as i moved further away from the tree it um the strength of that pulse diminished so there's some connection between this magic item and the tree i think that if we found the other pieces maybe would it would um solve the puzzle of the tree but i think for now that thomas still thomas is still exhausted if we've had another long day he should probably rest and then i suggest we i suggest |
| 01:50:54 | Jetten Elisedil  | we head back out in the dream how are you feeling thomas all right well shall we head over to the                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| 01:51:05 | Gren Greenmantle | so let's spend the night and rest um hold on when when when we're interacting with the dryad can we take out the heart stone that we found and show it to her                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |

| 01:51:12 | DM               | Okay. Yeah. You spend the night. Um, unfortunately, you have the exact same dream that you did the other night. A shared dream, and you both sort of recognize each other. You're in the dream. You're all sort of giving nervous glance to each other. And again, you see the dryad stare at you and say, Corrin? Yes?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |

I mean, which one is the least power that the enemy's likely to be? Simple or dark? Who's going to, who's that going to be? Is that going to be like priestesses and priests and stuff? Or what do I mean? The hags? How strong? How strong is the hag? Yeah, |

So, just so you know, in 10 feet of movement, so he only has 50. That's good. Um, when you are dealing with height creatures, and you can try to compute the distance between you and them, um, D&D simplifies it, and it just says, take whichever is the higher, no Pythagorean theorem stuff. So, um, I think you're probably like 20 feet from the long shadow, but it's 60 feet high, so it's 60 foot distance. Anyways. |

So prone has an interesting rule for you to know, Jutton. If you're making a ranged attack on a prone creature, you have disadvantage. Melee combatants in five feet have advantage, but because it's prone, it's kind of like you're ducking from fire. Okay. Okay. |

So as you take your short rest and you sort of reflect upon all of the events that you learned today in town. And some of the revelations you might have had. And this little bit of combat, you can take a level of five. Which is your big sort of jump in power. Because people can't attack. |
